

Countries in the World

There are currently 195 countries in the world. This total includes 193 member states of the United Nations and 2 observer states: the Holy See and the State of Palestine.

Countries vary widely in size, population, geography, culture, and economy. The largest country by area is Russia, while the smallest is Vatican City. The most populous country is China, followed closely by India.

Each country has its own system of government, traditions, and cultural heritage. Some countries are known for their technological innovations, such as the United States and Japan. Others are rich in natural beauty and biodiversity, like Brazil and Indonesia.

Regions like Europe, Asia, Africa, and the Americas contain a diverse set of nations with unique characteristics and histories.

Learning about different countries helps us understand global diversity and the interconnectedness of today's world.